Recognizing early signs of Dementia

Dr. Jayashree Dasgupta, MPhil, PhD, NIMHANS is a clinical psychologist with a specialization in neuropsychology. Co-Founder and Project Director of Samvedna Senior Care Foundation, Gurgaon, she has extensive research and clinical experience in Dementia. She was accompanied by her team including the Founder & Managing Director of Samvedna Ms. Archana Gautam Sharma, who is a BS in Computer Science from George Mason University, VA, USA. After spending 22 years in IT services, Archana started Samvedna Senior Care with a mission to help seniors live active and engaging lives. Jayashree’s presentation is recorded live on https://www.facebook.com/drvjs.vohra/videos/10216160610912988/.

Dr. Jayashree explained that Dementia is a neuro degenerative disorder characterized by deterioration in cognitive ability. A person with Dementia has difficulty with memory, learning new information, planning activities and becomes increasingly dependent on others for their care. People often struggle to find practical information about dementia and how to provide care for such patients. The talk focused on understanding dementia, what symptoms to look out for, the need to recognize dementia as a public health priority, and to address the challenges faced by persons with dementia and their families.

Initial signs of dementia are memory problems, misplacing things, difficulty in performing familiar tasks, problems with language, poor or decreased judgment and changes in mood and behavior. She also talked about the various interventions and the importance of seeking help.

Screening test was carried out, including for Rotarians. PDG Shaju Peter, who is well known for his sharp memory, is in discussion with one of the experts.

Longevity is one of the characteristics of today’s world. In this context, addressing health problems of the elderly, and particularly mental health aspects, becomes crucial for well being of individuals during their golden years.

Over 4.4 million people suffer from dementia in India, almost one in every 16 households has a Dementia patient. Only 10% of the cases are diagnosed for dementia in India. Patient dignity and quality care begins with awareness about the disease. Awareness drive helps people understand the risk factors, early warning indicators and symptoms of Dementia. This enables them to support and guide others who may be facing the onset of dementia. Detailed information about dementia is available on www.samvednacare.com.
